In the face of extremely difficult humanitarian conditions globally, we can be proud of our accomplishments as we look back on 2017—a year we responded to crises on four continents, delivering lifesaving assistance and easing the burden of so many who managed to survive in some of the most challenging conditions imaginable.

In the Middle East, our teams assisted tens of thousands of civilians whose lives remained in turmoil for yet another year of unrelenting civil war. In Syria, in a conflict headed into an eighth year of unprecedented human suffering and destruction, the cumulative total of those International Medical Corps has aided during the conflict reached nearly 16 million people. In Yemen, where three years of war have left three of every four residents relying on international humanitarian assistance for their survival, we supported primary healthcare units and major hospitals with basic medical and nutrition supplies, and delivered desperately needed water to hospitals so they could continue to function.

In Africa, we mobilized to meet the tremendous human needs caused by prolonged drought, heightened food insecurity levels, and the threat of famine and disease across an area ranging from Ethiopia, Somalia and South Sudan in the east to Nigeria in the west. In our own hemisphere, we responded to assist residents of Mexico, Puerto Rico, Florida and the island nation of Dominica as they struggled to rebuild their lives amid the wreckage of earthquakes and hurricanes.

Through it all, we maintained our core commitment to training, which we know from experience is the key to building new resilience into communities as we help them recover from disaster and emerge stronger and more confident to build better futures. In 2017, we trained thousands of ministry of health staff, local health workers and volunteers in some 30 countries. Our training focused on such critically important topics as emergency obstetric care, proper sanitation and hygiene habits; how to maintain clean water; provide psychological first aid; prevent gender-based violence and treat GBV survivors when it does occur; and much more. Anchoring such skills at the community level is our true and lasting gift to those we serve.

As we face the inevitable challenges that 2018 brings, we express our gratitude to our many friends and supporters who make up the International Medical Corps family. It is your commitment and generous support that enables us to do our lifesaving work to help those in great need, no matter where they may be.

For that, we extend our deepest thanks and appreciation.

ANNUAL MESSAGE
International Medical Corps: A Global First Responder

We provide training and deliver emergency healthcare, together with related services, to those affected by conflict, natural disaster or disease. We do this no matter where in the world they may be or what the conditions. We train people in their own communities, providing them with the skills needed to recover, to chart their own path to self-reliance and to shape their own future as they become effective First Responders.
OUR APPROACH

Speed Saves Lives

Our Emergency Response Teams deploy fast to assist those in great need—often arriving within hours to reach those even in the most remote, challenging environments. Drawing on experience gained in more than three decades of responding to disasters on five continents, our surge capacity includes physicians and nurses trained in emergency medicine, supported by specialists in essential healthcare services ranging from mental health and psychosocial support to technical advice for addressing urgent nutrition, water, sanitation and hygiene needs.

As emergency conditions ease, we stay on, partnering with survivors to build a better future. We work with community leaders, hire and train local staff, develop partnerships and evaluate progress to ensure quality. Our staff numbers some 7,000 worldwide, with 90% recruited locally, ensuring that the knowledge and tools required to prepare for future emergencies remains anchored in the community—so that if disaster should strike again, residents can themselves be effective First Responders.
Our core strengths form the heart of our technical competence—competence we use to shape programs that enable communities hit by disaster to make their way on a journey of recovery, from relief to self-reliance. In 2017, International Medical Corps applied these core strengths to conduct successful programs that saved countless lives and eased the suffering for millions.

OUR PROGRAMS

From Relief to Self-Reliance

EMERGENCY RESPONSE AND PREPAREDNESS

In Yemen, International Medical Corps responded to the world’s largest outbreak of cholera in recent memory. In 2017, our teams supported a total of 81 cholera treatment facilities in six of the country’s 23 governorates to treat and cure those who had contracted the disease. We also engaged in activities to prevent cholera and other communicable diseases.

HEALTH SERVICES SUPPORT

Our work in West and Central African countries, including Cameroon, CAR, Chad, Nigeria, Guinea, Mali and Sierra Leone, supported 289 primary healthcare facilities and 54 Mobile Medical Units.

FAMILY AND COMMUNITY HEALTH

In Lebanon, we supported vaccination coverage in refugee and host communities by administering 31,006 doses of DPT3 (diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis) to infants during their first year of life.

WOMEN’S AND CHILDREN’S HEALTH

In Somalia, we helped provide 20,428 women with continuous access to antenatal care.

NUTRITION AND FOOD SECURITY

In Nigeria, we trained 106 Ministry of Health staff and 670 community health workers in community management of acute malnutrition.

WATER SANITATION AND HYGIENE

In drought-affected Ethiopia, we constructed and rehabilitated 138 water sources to provide communities with access to safe water for drinking and hygiene.

MENTAL HEALTH AND PSYCHOSOCIAL SUPPORT

In Syria, our teams provided mental health and psychosocial support services to 3,848 individuals—more than half of them children.
Training underpins all that we do

Since beginning our lifesaving work in 1984, training has been an essential part of what we do. The level of our commitment to training and the depth of our experience in passing key skills and knowledge to local communities help bring those recovering from disaster closer to their goal of self-reliance.

SOUTH SUDAN

Skilled International Medical Corps staff introduced the concept of psychological first aid (PFA) to 395 local healthcare professionals, including physicians, nurses, midwives and healthcare specialists from three national ministries and departments. Our training provided insights on some of the most common psychological responses individuals develop in the wake of direct exposure to distressing, often violent, events. We shared knowledge on how to support those affected and how to connect distressed individuals to the services they need. The training was viewed as essential to adequately sensitize health professionals to the growing need for PFA in a country that has taken in more than 650,000 refugees in recent years, most of them fleeing the horrors of war in neighboring Syria.

International Medical Corps trained more than 200 health workers employed mainly in clinics and hospitals in northern areas of the country, providing them with important skills on preventing infection, communicable diseases and malnutrition. Training was conducted in the towns of Nyal, Maban and Malakal, where some of the worst fighting and subsequent displacements of the country’s ongoing civil war have occurred. Specifics of the training included conveying to Community Health Workers the ability to identify and refer cases of malnourishment found at the community level and how to refer them to sites offering specialized treatment; how to prevent and reduce dissemination of infections common to health facilities; and key messaging on how to prevent cholera.

In 2017, hunger and the fear of famine darkened the lives of residents in the country’s northeastern regions despite their recent freedom from long years of Boko Haram rule. We conducted training for more than 1,400 health professionals and community members in the community-level management of acute malnutrition (CMAM). Among those trained were staff members of Nigeria’s Ministry of Health, local community health workers and members of our own staff. The knowledge conveyed through the training led to increased accuracy in the initial assessment of malnutrition, a rise in referrals by community nutrition volunteers to Outpatient Therapeutic Programs and fewer errors in data collection. In women’s care support groups, more information and counselling on malnutrition was passed to pregnant women and new mothers by mothers leading the groups who had undergone training.

Our work in 2017 underscored the priority we place in training:
In 2017, International Medical Corps responded to the humanitarian needs of millions of people in crisis on four continents. Among the results of our work:

4.8 MILLION MEDICAL CONSULTATIONS
Of these, 1.6 MILLION involved children under 5.

8 MILLION DIRECT BENEFICIARIES
Additionally, we estimate that our work in 2017 indirectly benefited 50 MILLION people residing within our programs’ zone of influence.

2,644 HEALTHCARE FACILITIES SUPPORTED
Including mobile clinics serving remote rural areas, village health posts and large urban hospitals—collectively, these health facilities form the heart of a nation’s healthcare system.

106,428 TRAINING CERTIFICATES AWARDED
Training fosters pride, nurtures hope and builds self-reliance in individuals and their communities.

1.8 MILLION IMMUNIZATIONS ADMINISTERED
Including 896,878 diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus vaccinations and 871,017 inoculations against measles.
NUTRITION
The foundation of life.
Admitted 606,173 malnourished children under 2 to Blanket Supplementary Feeding Programs.

WOMEN’S AND CHILDREN’S HEALTH
A key priority for healthy communities.
Supported 55,565 deliveries of new babies attended by skilled professionals.

WATER SANITATION AND HYGIENE
The key to good health.
Distributed 327,559 hygiene kits.

GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE
A violation of fundamental human rights.
Offered psychosocial support to 39,837 survivors of GBV.

MENTAL HEALTHCARE
A worthwhile investment that pays off in the long run.
Provided 43,268 people with mental health and psychosocial support services.
In 2017, we provided humanitarian assistance and valuable healthcare training in 33 countries on 4 continents.

MAY
ANNUAL WOMEN’S LUNCHEONS
International Medical Corps President and CEO Nancy Aossey presides over Women’s Luncheons held in Los Angeles and Malibu, where attendees hear our Deputy Director of Emergency Response and Preparedness, Sean Casey, discuss the challenges of providing assistance to those trapped across a stretch of land extending thousands of miles from Yemen in the Middle East, across the Red Sea and much of Africa, to Nigeria on Africa’s West Coast. A few months later, International Medical Corps teams respond to assist residents of a major earthquake in Mexico, and survivors of hurricanes in Puerto Rico, Florida and the island nation of Dominica.

AUGUST
BUMP DAY
International Medical Corps and co-founder What To Expect mark the third annual #BumpDay. The campaign generates a global response, as people around the world post more than 50,000 photos of their own bumps—and the bumps of those they love—to underscore the urgent global health issue of making pregnancy safer for mothers and babies. The campaign receives widespread coverage from celebrities, influencers and major media, including People magazine and Entertainment Tonight.

AUGUST
GLOBAL EMERGENCY RESPONSE COALITION
We join with seven prominent humanitarian organizations to form the Global Emergency Response Coalition, which fights the growing emergencies surrounding hunger and famine that extend across Africa and also include Yemen.

Women’s Luncheon
NOVEMBER
ANNUAL AWARDS CELEBRATION
Some 500 friends, supporters and guests of International Medical Corps gather in Los Angeles to celebrate our lifesaving work and highlight the courageous work of our field staff around the world. Through the generosity of those who attend, we raise nearly $11 million to support that work. And because every unrestricted dollar contributed generates on average more than $30 in additional grants from institutional donors and donated medicines and supplies, the actual impact of those donations is far greater.

2017 HONOREES:

Partnering for the Greater Good

Collaboration with FedEx speeds assistance to survivors of disaster no matter where it might be needed

Adding heft to our global reach, International Medical Corps works with FedEx to speed delivery of critically needed supplies and equipment to our teams assisting disaster survivors, no matter where in the world a crisis occurs. The centerpiece of this collaboration is a portable 50-ton emergency field hospital that can be airlifted to a global crisis spot thousands of miles away, then assembled so responders can begin treating patients. The facility is flexible, giving us the capability to deploy smaller, modular components to meet specific demands of a narrowly focused disaster, or to deploy the entire unit when responding to a mass-casualty event. In the aftermath of Hurricanes Irma and Maria, which struck the Caribbean in the late summer of 2017, assets from the hospital were deployed to Puerto Rico to treat survivors, where our partners provided more than 7,000 health consultations in the three months that followed the disasters.

Normally pre-positioned near FedEx’s global hub at Memphis International Airport for short-notice deployment, the facility drew media attention in February 2018 when it was assembled on land adjacent to a park in downtown Los Angeles, where International Medical Corps, FedEx and the City of Los Angeles hosted a training and simulation exercise.

Building a Better Response Project—an enduring partnership

In partnership with Concern Worldwide and the Harvard Humanitarian Initiative, International Medical Corps is leading a global project designed to provide workers from international and local national non-government organizations (NGOs) with the knowledge needed to better engage with the international system that coordinates humanitarian aid.

The USAID-funded Building a Better Response Project addresses critical knowledge gaps in the humanitarian community, improves overall coordination among the system’s many players and helps respond to the needs of those hit by crisis. Learning tools include an online course offered in Arabic, English and French, with 37,763 registered users globally at the end of 2017. We also conducted 62 in-person workshops on four continents to build the capacity of national and international NGOs.

Technical Rapid Response Team

With support from USAID, and working in close collaboration with UNICEF and the Global Nutrition Cluster, International Medical Corps partners with Save the Children and Action Against Hunger to strengthen the quality of the nutrition response during emergencies. We do this by supporting the collective nutrition community within a country or by providing targeted support to individual agencies.

Members of the team include three nutrition experts, including one from International Medical Corps. Between August 2015, when the project was launched, and early 2018, the team has deployed 37 times to 14 countries, including Haiti, Yemen, Iraq and Nigeria. The experts have conducted nutrition assessments, managed technical training and strengthened existing capacity. Other tasks have ranged from addressing critical nutrition-related issues ranging from the need to overcome barriers to infant and young-child feeding during an emergency, to quality treatment of severe acute malnutrition.
International Medical Corps Worldwide is a global humanitarian alliance that comprises the resources and capabilities of two independent affiliate organizations: International Medical Corps and International Medical Corps-UK. Together, our mission is to save lives and relieve suffering by providing healthcare and training. With headquarters in the United States and the United Kingdom respectively, we collaborate to maximize resources for the delivery of appropriate relief and development activities.
